

YOUR WORKPLACE AND US

> THE issue

In times of crisis, whether its fire, flood, family violence, addiction, poverty or homelessness, The Salvation Army want to be there to help. As new challenges like human trafficking, ice, mental health and youth homelessness escalate, the Salvos rely more and more on the support the community.

> OUR response

The Salvation Army aims to be a community builder, not just a service provider; responding not only to immediate needs but journeying with people for the long haul.

AN IMPACTFUL PARTNERSHIP

With a workplace giving program at its core, Salvation Army will work with your organisation to set goals that inspire your staff.

Examples of the collective impact of donations:

Examples of ways in which your staff could be further engaged:

> 20 employees ($5,200 pa)

Can provide 520 meals to those in need

> 50 employees ($13,000 pa)

Helps two people in crisis work towards solutions and find short-term accommodation

> 100 employees ($26,000 pa)

Means four young people won't have to sleep on the street and can receive hope for tomorrow

Examples assume each employee donates $5 per week.

- > Regular updates on our programs and services so you know the impact of your donation
- > Roll up your sleeves and volunteer as a team at one of our services or centres
- > Hold workplace fundraisers and raise money for our community programs
- > Salvation Army representatives can visit your workplace and share the difference your contribution has made

The Australian Charities Fund partners with The Salvation Army promoting workplace giving.

THE SALVATION ARMY AT A GLANCE

Who we are

The Salvation Army is one of the largest national providers of welfare services and, having operated in Australia for over 130 years, has an extensive history of working with the most marginalised and disadvantaged people in our communities.

What we do

We provide over 1,000 social programs and activities through a network of social support services, community centres and churches across the country. Our areas of focus are youth, homelessness and emergency assistance, recovery services (drug and alcohol rehabilitation), rural and emergency (disaster) services. Our programs focus on providing holistic responses and services aimed at addressing welfare concerns.

How we do it

The Salvation Army looks to secure, long-term funding for programs in these areas; ensuring our services can reach those in need, when they need it most. Offering support without discrimination to anyone who needs it has been at the heart of our mission since 1880, and every week thousands of Australians turn to us for help – for shelter, food, a refuge from domestic violence, for counselling and many other needs.

REAL STORY

17-year-old Amina had nowhere to turn when her family disowned her and she wanted to leave her forced marriage to a man 10 years her senior. Thanks to the Freedom Partnership initiative, Amina left her marriage and moved into The Salvation Army's Safe House, where she received support from case workers and staff to access family court and start a new life. Today, Amina has been accepted into university and plans to fulfill her dreams of becoming an independent working woman.
